

The China Business Review

July-August 1988

Planning for a
High-Tech Future

The National Council for US-China Trade announces its name change to

The United States-China Business Council

Our new name underscores that we are:

- ↔ A professional organization representing the interests of our member companies with effective programs in all types of China business: trade, of course, but also investment counseling, project financing, technology transfer, and licensing.
- ↔ A group with a proven track record for providing in-depth market research in China, tailored business briefings, and on-the-ground troubleshooting in China.
- ↔ A voice respected both in Beijing and Washington speaking on our members' behalf on issues affecting US-China commercial relations.
- ↔ Improving understanding in the conduct of business and increasing awareness of the important role commerce plays in the overall U.S.-China relationship through our new research and educational arm, the China Business Forum.

For information on membership or services the Council provides call (202) 429-0340 or write to:

The U.S.-China Business Council
1818 N Street NW, Suite 500
Washington, DC 20036

The China Business Review

The magazine of the US–China Business Council

July–August 1988

Volume 15, Number 4

Cover: Children learning to use computers offer hope for China's high-tech future. Photo courtesy of Xinhua News Agency.

Technology exports: International interest in Chinese technology is on the rise. Page 32.

Nonferrous metals: From aluminum to zinc, many new nonferrous projects are now in the works. Page 40.

Servicing Foreign Equipment American companies discuss strategies for effective sales support in China. by Perri Strawn	6
Project Notebook Babcock and Wilcox Beijing Co. Ltd. by Julia S. Sensenbrenner	10
The Long-Awaited Cooperative Venture Law The law finally catches up with this popular investment form. by Jerome Alan Cohen	14
Laying Corporate Foundations for China's High-Tech Future Entrepreneurial spirit may change the way China applies research to production. by Richard P. Suttmeier	22
Integrating the Electronics Industry Upgrading integrated circuits is the key to success. by Denis Fred Simon	27
China's Technology Exports Once strictly on the receiving end, China now offers home-grown technologies for sale abroad. by Erik Baark	32
New Rules for Technology Import Contracts China's vast technology needs—and spending worries—are reflected in new legislation. by Christopher G. Oechsli	35
The Technical Education Challenge Can vocational schools train enough technical specialists to meet China's needs? by Jurgen Henze	38
The New Face of Nonferrous Metals A strategic shift will channel more investment into new projects. by David Richter	40
Computers that Speak Chinese What Chinese language software system suits your needs? by William Cross	45
Trademark Update New rules address this fast-developing area of law. by David B. Kay	49
What's in a Name? Foreign companies can now apply to register enterprise names, but full protection is yet to come. by Mitchell A. Silk	52
The Forthcoming Copyright Law An important first step in protecting authors' rights. by Gao Hang	53

Departments

Trends and Issues	4	Bookshelf	56
Council Activities	20	China Business	58
Member Spotlight	54	Classified Advertising	62