

The China Business Review

March-April 1982

Discovering the South China Sea

美
中
貿
易

You can spend $50,000 to develop a second-class in-house research capability on the China market.

Or you can join the National Council for U.S.-China Trade. For much less.

The National Council's Washington, D.C. library houses the most complete collection of materials on China's trade and economy in the U.S. We have files of over a quarter of a million clippings from U.S. trade journals and Asian and European publications in English and Chinese. At hand are statistics on China's foreign trade, compilations of U.S. and Chinese laws and regulations, and several specialized Chinese journals and export catalogs. And our library staff is as close as your telephone.

The Council's staff includes experts on all the nuts and bolts of trade with the PRC, and in newsletters, briefings, seminars, and various publications keeps member firms informed of market trends and policy changes. Our Beijing Office maintains daily contact with Chinese corporations, commissions and ministries and is uniquely capable of cutting through red tape and getting authoritative answers to pressing business questions.

Membership in the Council is a bargain compared to the costs of doing it yourself. Clip the coupon and send it in for more information about how the Council can help you.

The National Council for U.S.-China Trade
1050 17th Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20036

Please send me more information on the National Council and its services.

Name _____

Title _____

Firm _____

Address _____

DGR-1-CBR